This extension didn't give us any trouble. Half of the variables from the extension were in the Pin service, the other half in the Ledger service. Changing them was not a problem.

When we implemented the SetTransferLimit methods for one of the previous extensions, we created a scheduler to keep track of requests that had to be processed at a later date. We simply extended that system to keep track of SetValue requests as well.

Almost no existing code had to actually be changed, we simply had to add a new method chain for the SetValue method in the applicable services.
